Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1400 on Saturday 25 Sep 2021

UK Outlook for Thursday 30 Sep 2021 to Saturday 9 Oct 2021:
A low pressure system will cross the country at the start of this period, bringing heavy rain and isolated thunderstorms for all. Thereafter, further low pressure systems will affect the UK, particularly northwestern areas. This will bring organised bands of rain, heavy at times, interspersed with cooler and showery periods but some sunny spells too. Drier and more settled conditions are likely across southern and eastern parts of the country, but there is still a chance that bands of rain and strong winds from the north and west could extend into these areas. The temperatures are most likely to be slightly below average for this time of the year during the start of the period, but will gradually return to near average later.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.